4.2.1 Library is automated using Integrated Library Management System (ILMS), subscription to e-resources, amount spent on purchase of books, journals and per day usage of library

The library as a tool for education:

The library, which has an extensive collection of books, journals, magazines, and periodicals, is the centre for knowledge. Students and professors use the library's resources, such as In-House software, to search for books by title, author, etc. Teachers' and undergrads' separate reading rooms are offered. There is also a stand-alone e-library featuring resources including eBook and e-journal subscriptions. A comprehensive library that is rich in resources and has 24/7 internet access for staff and students supports education. More than 6737 textbooks, reference books, national-20/international journals 05, periodicals, and other readable pieces available online support our library.

Software for the library is also available to assist students with simple loan requests and book returns. It is built with a great deal of experience and laborious effort solely to benefit pupils learning current information. More than 85 students can be seated at once in the library. Students can use 10 computer terminals equipped with the newest software and free internet access. Students get free access to the internet for downloading. Students can access online journals and other E-resources from the NDL Digital library by subscribing to the library. Additionally, national and international physical publications are provided at no cost to students for their literature review.

The library is very special and can accommodate huge number of students at a single time. There are distinct sections for reading, e-books, issues returned, and references in this area. Students can choose the book that they need for the assignment using the library's free access system. To help with their GPAT preparation, final year students can issue up to six books, while all other students are limited to two books. In order to further enrich the library and foster a giving mindset among staff and students, the library also encourages old, used books to be donated by faculty, students, and alumni.

SVPCOP has purchased books and magazines for the library with maximum funds that are allocated in college budget. Furthermore, foot traffic monitoring in libraries can be quite helpful as it provides insight into the behaviour of readers. Therefore, you can ascertain whether consumers are hoping for extended opening hours, a fresh selection of books, or more complimentary services by employing the straightforward yet powerful footfall technique. Libraries can entice more individuals to come read by making reading more enjoyable for its patrons.
